ABSTRACT

A file compression method comprises receiving a file from a processor by a video capture device, compressing the file into a compressed file by the video capture device, and outputting the compressed file by the video capture device to the processor.